

Thousands Agree: Netflix CEO Reed Hastings Should Remove Cuties!

Posted September 1, Repost Sept. 8 2020

In a nationwide message by mail and online, Eugene Delgaudio, president of Public Advocate said:

Netflix has crossed the line!

On September 9th, Netflix will release a film that sexualizes 11-year-old girls in ways that should be criminal!

The deceptively-named movie, Cuties, tells the story of an 11-year-old girl named Amy and her obsession with joining a local "twerking" dance crew.

If you don't know, "twerking" is an ultra-sexualized dance that consists of rapidly moving one's buttocks, often with very light, or even practically non-existent, clothing.

And Netflix is associating this vile "dance" with 11-year-old girls!

The Netflix movie Cuties is a prime example of how media today contributes to the normalization of the sexualization of children.

Regardless of the filmmakers' intent, this movie sexualizes children.

Real child actresses were being told to dance in a sexually provocative way for this film to be made.

And if Netflix releases the movie as planned on September 9th, over 150 million Netflix subscribers will be able to access Cuties on demand.

Pedophiles are celebrating this movie's release.

It's crucial we stand up to Netflix and show them that parents everywhere are outraged by this distribution of sexual content involving children.

Because with the reach Netflix has, there is a social responsibility to ensure that the content they distribute does not contain themes that damage the welfare of our society and young children.
